United States Holocaust Museum Teacher Fellowship Program	Students and/or teachers	The Museum Teacher Fellowship Program develops a national corps of skilled educators who serve as the core of the museum's efforts to ensure quality Holocaust education in secondary schools. Teacher fellows organize conferences, lead workshops, write curricula, serve on boards of Holocaust museums and education centers, lead study trips to Holocaust sites, and serve as conduits to the museum for educators, institutions, professional organizations, and community groups. Each year up to twenty educators in grades 7-12 and community college faculty are designated as new museum teacher fellows. These educators must show evidence of extensive knowledge of Holocaust history, successful teaching experience, and participation in community and professional organizations. Fellows participate in a five-day, all-expense-paid summer institute at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C., that is designed to immerse them in advanced historical and pedagogical issues. Following the summer institute, fellows are expected to create and implement an outreach project in their schools, colleges, communities, or professional organizations. In July of the following year, fellows will attend a follow-up program at the museum to assess their various efforts and to continue their study of the Holocaust. Community college faculty and middle and high school history, social studies, foreign-language, English and journalism teachers, as well as librarians and instructional media specialists, are encouraged to apply for fellowships. Other content areas also will be considered. It is expected that applicants will have taught the Holocaust for a minimum of five years.
